Improve Emotional Intelligence in the Workplace

Dr. Jeanine Parolini taught about emotional intelligence at our EQ Ministry Equip training on May 31. Parolini highlighted the importance of recognizing certain truths about people, including the one thing to consider when dealing with people.

An important trait of improving your EQ in the workplace is recognizing that each employee brings their whole heart to work. Dr. Parolini shared two steps to creating a workplace with fully engaged people.

Plus the role of safety and trust in workplace relationships.

Sankofa 2018 Pastor's Reflections:

Our second Sankofa journey took 28 Twin Cities multi-ethnic pastors to the South to learn about civil rights and racial reconciliation the first week of May.

Read a collection of reflections from pastors who went on the journey.

Dr. Greg Boyd, Woodland Hills Church

Dr. Greg Boyd writes about his initial reluctance to going on the Sankofa journey, yet how hearing the stories of the African-American brothers and sisters journeying with him had a profound impact on him. Dr. Boyd shares how this experiential and relational journey devastated him, hurt him and changed him.

Rev. Dr. Dennis Edwards, Sanctuary Covenant Church

Rev. Dr. Dennis Edwards writes about the questions and feelings that arose in him after seeing a lynching memorial listing names from Laurens County, SC – where his mother was raised.

Kenya Mejia, The Urban Refuge Church

Kenja Mejia writes about being inspired by the brave Civil Rights workers who fought for equal rights, and as a woman of color, how their struggle bolstered her sense of identity and self-worth.

Pastor David Lenz, Hope Church

Pastor David Lenz writes about how facing our country's past he came face to face with pure evil; and yet acknowledging that facing the past is the only way we can move forward, together.

Gail Gisi, Union Gospel Mission

Gail Gisi writes about the way the "lens" of her mind and heart was adjusted during the four day journey traveling with this team.
